

Digital Complexion Analysis Provides Baseline for Your Facial Rejuvenation

Dr. Sonal Patel, Ph.D.

Would you expect your doctor to give you a treatment plan without doing an evaluation of your physical needs first? When it comes to your specific skincare needs, why would you approach it differently? After all, your skin is your body's largest organ.

Because at Radiance Medspa we believe your skincare needs should be treated in the same manner as your other health care needs, we offer our clients a complimentary digital complexion analysis to identify your skin's condition — both above and below the surface.

The digital complexion analysis takes two sets of facial pictures: one set in normal light which shows the surface conditions, and the second set under Ultraviolet (UV) light which shows the subsurface conditions.

The data that we collect from the analysis allows us to formulate a customized skincare solutions package to give our clients the “wow” results that you are looking for. The analysis also provides an informative comparison of your complexion's characteristics to others of your same age and skin type. Additionally, it is used to monitor your progress as you go through our skincare solutions package, which is invaluable if you are looking for results-oriented treatments.

The first set of photos is taken under normal light which provides an analysis of the following areas:

Visible Spots – Provides a picture analysis of visible spots including freckles, acne scars, sun/age spots, and vascular lesions (broken capillaries).

Pores – Shows the circular surface openings of sweat gland ducts.

Wrinkles – Shows the degree to which the skin's elasticity has decreased as a result of sun exposure.

Texture – Analyzes the degree of skin smoothness and evenness.

The second set of photos is taken under UV light which provides an analysis of:

UV Spots – Melanin coagulates below the skin surface as a result of sun damage. UV damage is generally invisible under normal lighting conditions.

Porphyryns – are bacterial excretions that can become lodged in pores and indicates the presence of bacteria that can potentially lead to acne or other skin conditions.

How is the customized treatment plan developed?

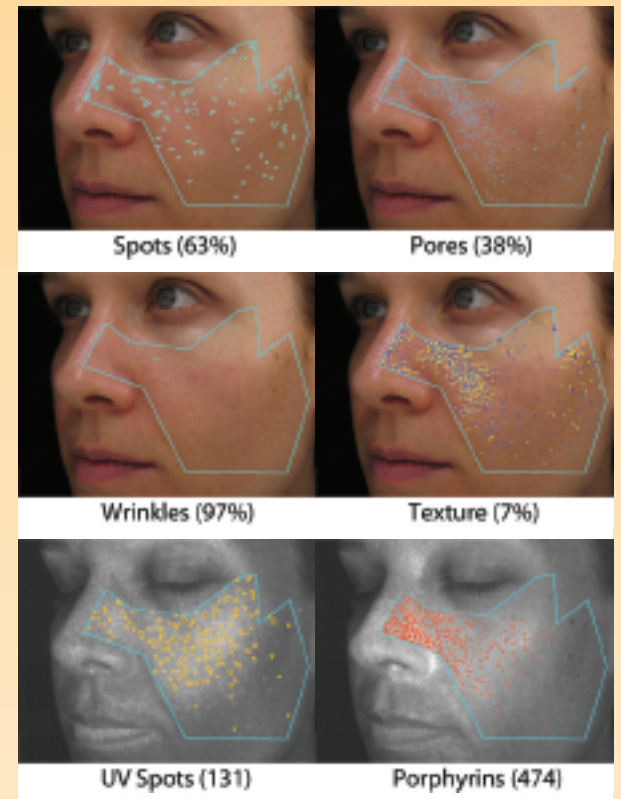

The complexion analysis data provides us with a “road map” of what your needs are. Following a consultation about your needs, a unique combination of options to achieve optimal facial rejuvenation are presented to you that combines your immediate concerns with long-term goals for healthier radiant skin. The treatment plan that will be optimal for you and to fit your budget.

Your customized solutions plan may involve any combination of services such as customized facials, chemical peels, microdermabrasion, photo facials, Botox, dermal fillers, permanent hair removal, pharmaceutical grade skincare products, mineral makeup and even permanent cosmetics—all depending on your special needs!

Dr. Patel, Medspa Director at Radiance, uses her doctorate in Molecular Biology to stay abreast of the facial rejuvenation sciences. Her mission is to offer only services that are clinically-proven and results-oriented. Her belief is that an educated client is the best client, so she is always available to clients for question or concerns.

The other members of the team at Radiance consist of trained and experienced medical estheticians and nurses along with the medical director Dr. John V. Belonte, Jr., M.D.

Percentile scores for texture, wrinkles, spots and pores depict your ranking relative to others of the same age, gender and skin type (higher scores are better). The scores for UV spots and porphyryns represent the number of individual skin features detected (lower scores are better).
